MESSAGE FROM THE DEAN

It is a special pleasure for me to be a part of this 1988 edition of the Yearbook. The pages of this publication reflect the creativity and initiative of those who have invested countless hours in its preparation. These pages also record aspects of the life and times of a unique group of students enrolled in nursing studies at the University of Toronto in 1987-88. As such they form a precious record to be enjoyed now and treasured always. And to all who contributed to these pages in any way our thanks.

MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIRPERSON

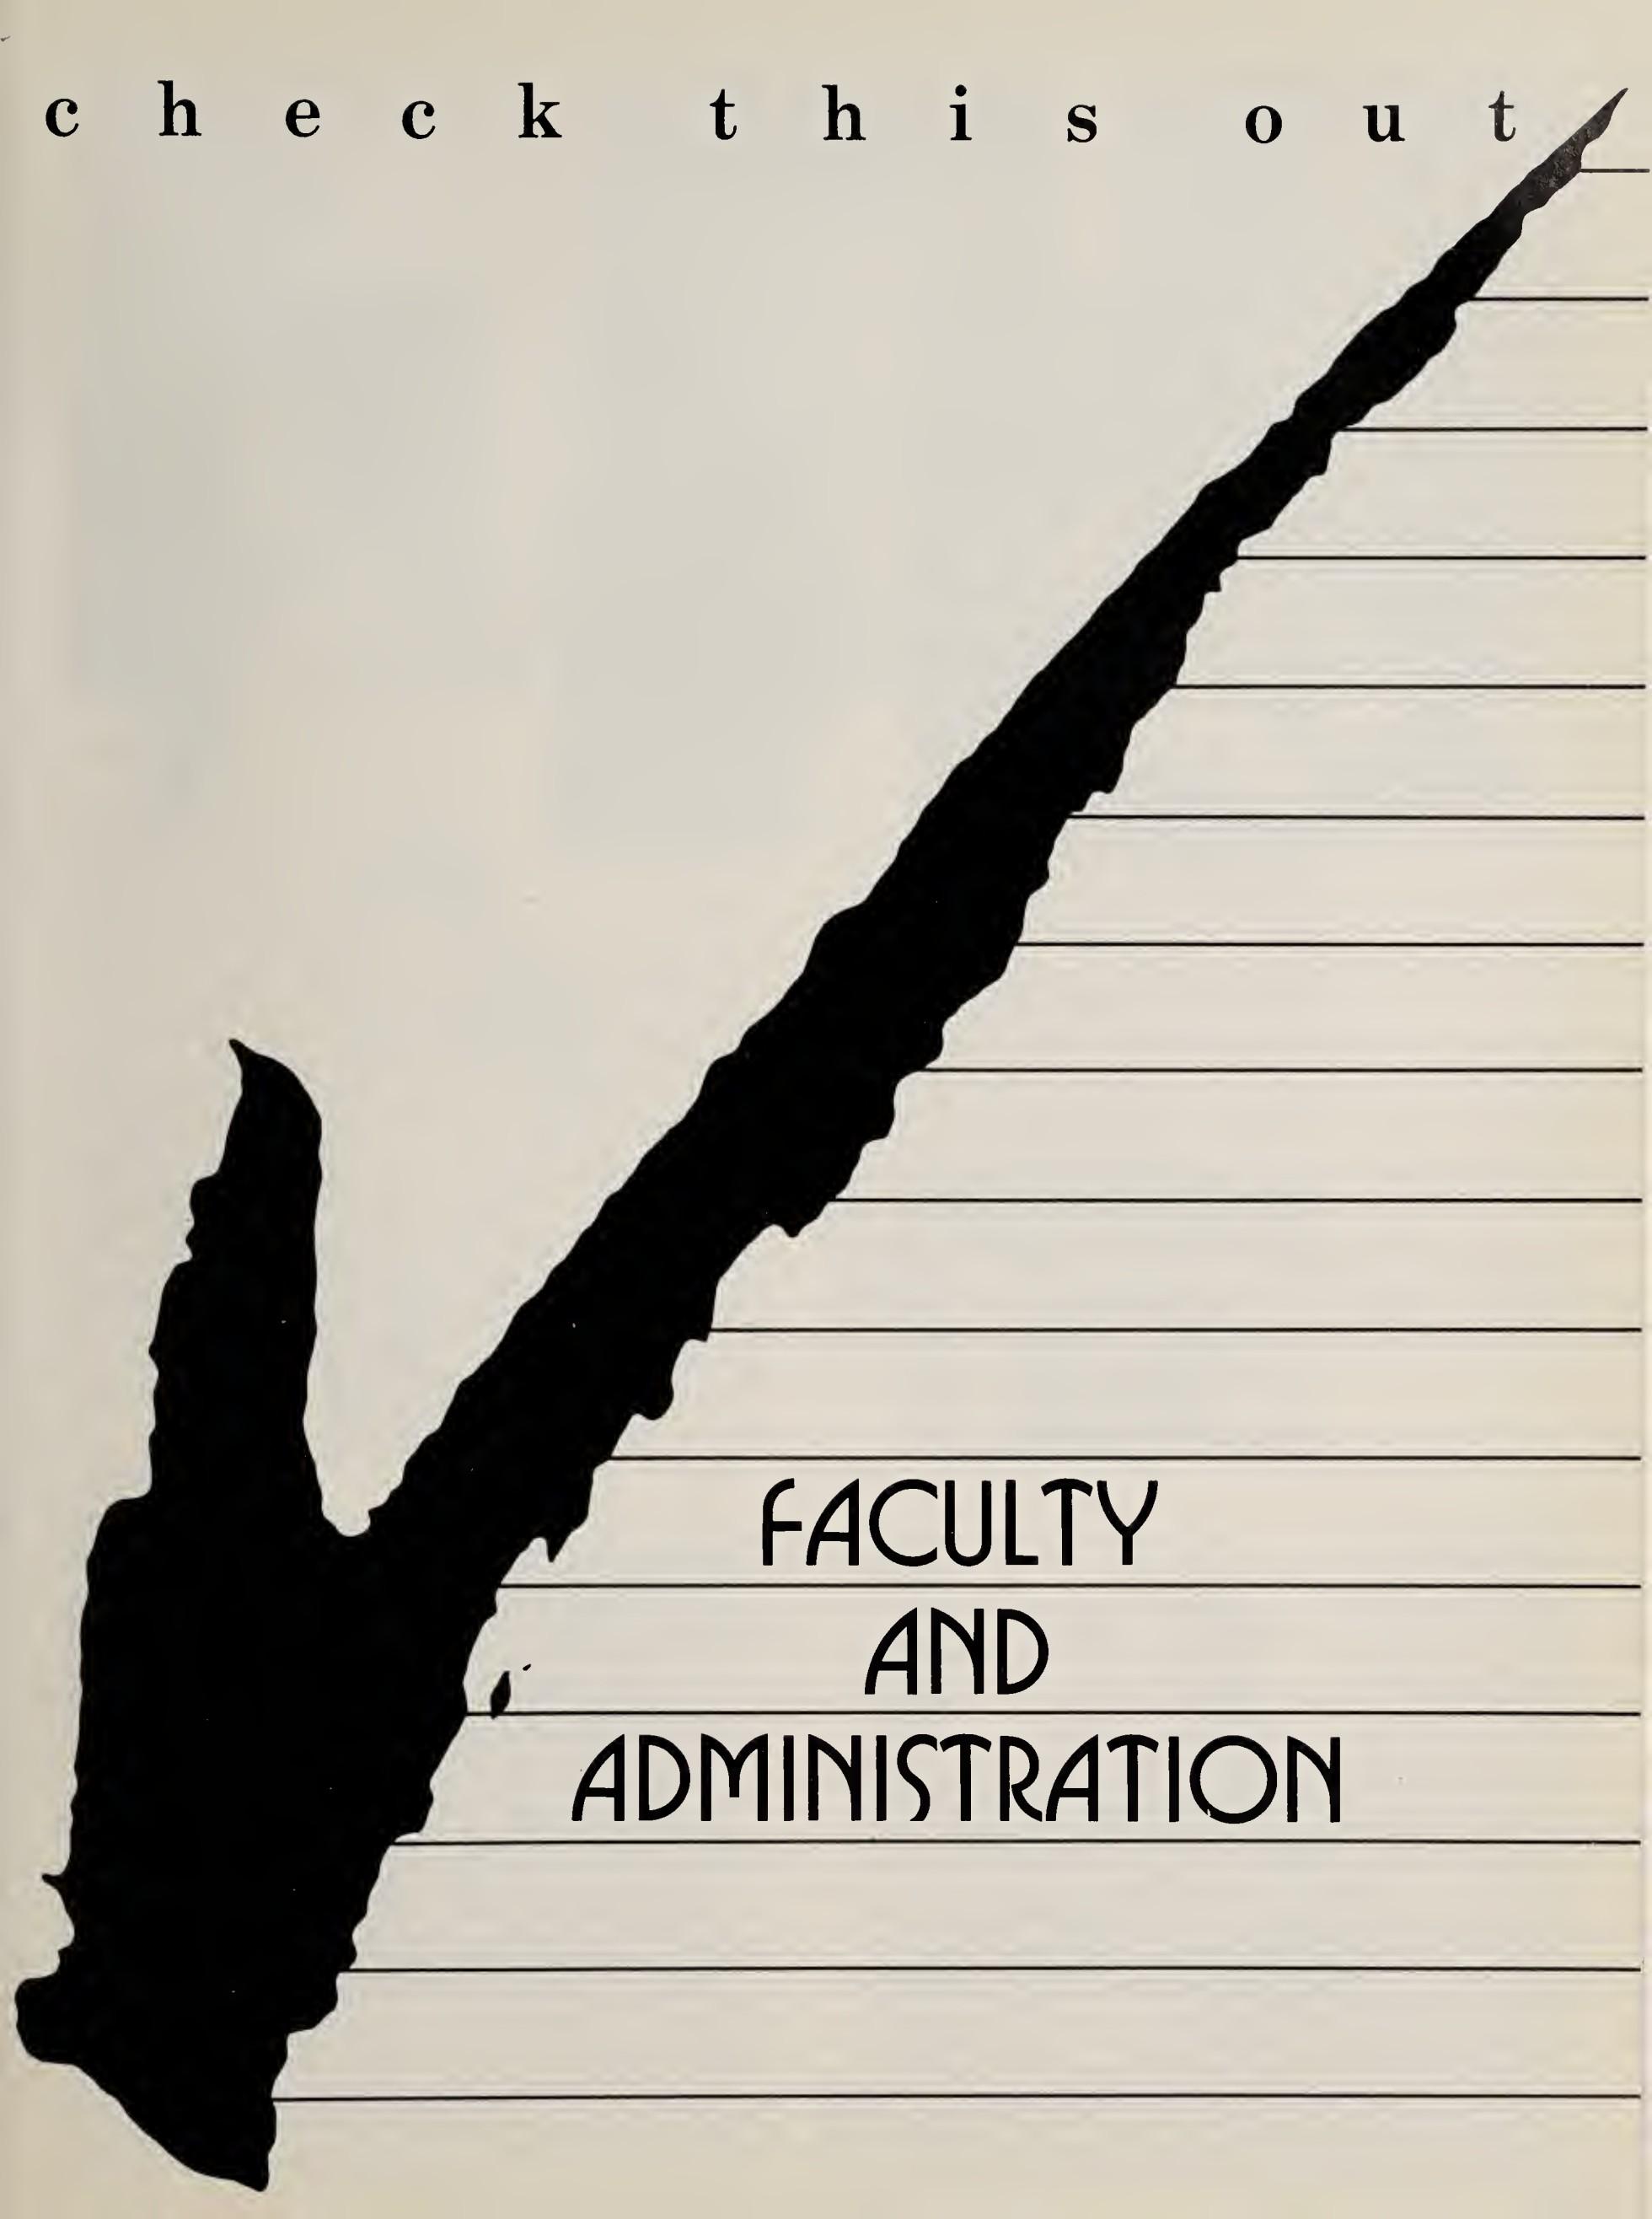

I am pleased and proud to congratulate the Class of 1987 on your graduation from the Faculty of Nursing. As the first class to graduate since I have assumed the position of undergraduate chair you are special to me. Your many comments, enquiries, and challenges have guided and stimulated me in my adaptation to this new role.

On behalf of all the undergraduate faculty members I wish you well as you move now into your professional careers.

DISORIENTATION

I'm proud to be a nurse, I'm very proud to be a nurse,
I'm DAMN proud to be a nurse!

Orientation: What a way to start University! Barbecues, free lunch, suds pub (among others), and the Nursing tea. Don't worry, gaining weight is the least of your worries. Remember the scavenger hunt, the boat cruise, the campus run-a-round, and the Shinerama bed race. Are you exhausted yet? What a way to start the new year!

ON THE TRAIN

"Orbicularis oculi", chanted the train, rushing through the night. "Orbicularis oculi orbicularis oculi orbicularis occ-"

"Awk", said Frieda, waking with a start. She scrambled upright in her seat, heart pounding. What the hell is orbicularis oculi, she thought, frantically flipping through the pages of her textbook: is there such a thing? Apparently there was. A muscle around the eye, announced the text.

"Eye muscle, eye muscle, eye muscle," muttered Frieda under her breath, then sighed, the edge of her panic momentarily dulled. So much for that, anyway.

"So much for that so much for that," agreed the train, hurtling on.

So much for that indeed. Over the last few hours it has been borne in upon Frieda that her chances of memorizing the four hundred and twenty pages of her anatomy textbook in time for tomorrow's exam were slim. Her weekend at home had been extremely pleasant. Saturday night in particular had been filled with convivial excesses of one kind and another. Consequently though, as these things go, it had not been a weekend conducive to the more studious pursuits. Sunday night was now upon her and time was running out as rapidly as the train was approaching Toronto. Frieda's despair was mounting.

Compounding the problem was the fact that, due to her lack of sleep the previous night, Frieda was finding it difficult to keep her eyes open and her attention focused; she kept drifting into a semi-conscious state. For the umpteenth time, Frieda opened her eyes as wide as she could and stared fiercely at the pages before her. But the motion of the train was lulling and very soon, Frieda's orbicularis oculi began to constrict yet again. Her eyelids drooped, her head sagged, the textbook slid from her lap into the aisle, unheeded.

Which was why Monday morning I found Frieda arriving at the Medical Sciences building to write the exam, unprepared and desperately glum.

I'm going to fail dismally, she said to herself, pushing through the entrance doors.

I'll probably get the worst mark in the class, she thought, working herself into a state of mortified misery as she went down the stairs.

I'll be academically suspended for idiocy, she was thinking somewhat hysterically as she hurried through the corridors. And suddenly realized that she didn't know where she was.

Fresh panic set in. Her heart began flopping like a fish out of water: flip, flop, flup it went against her ribs. Her hands trembled and were damp. She began to rush through the hallways faster, faster, faster. But she met no one and saw nothing familiar: the corridors were enormous and empty. She was alone and lost in the cavernous, cadaverous bowels of the Med-Sci building.

As if this were not enough, Frieda began to notice that something was happening around her as she rushed on. The walls, the ceiling, the floor were all heaving and dimpling in an extremely unnerving manner. Everything began to take on a moist and fleshy hue. The air grew dark and close.

I'm hallucinating, thought Frieda wildly. I'm breaking under all this exam pressure.

She tried to blunder on but it was increasingly difficult to move. The hallway had become a mass of waving, striated villi and ominous black crypts. With growing horror, Frieda realized that the bowels of the building had become bowels indeed. She could scarcely move through the congestion of gesticulating villi, each of them reaching out, tentacle-like, to grab her.

And suddenly, one of them did grab her, wrapping itself around her arm. As Frieda opened her mouth to scream, the villus began to shake her back and forth, back and forth.

"Excuse me," it said . . .

"Excuse me."

Frieda swam up through currents of confused slumber and opened her eyes. The train, swaying gently from side to side, had slowed to a crawl. Outside the base of the CN Tower rolled by in the gloom. The elderly gentleman in the seat next to her was peering into Frieda's face and shaking her tentatively.

"Excuse me," he said again.

"Guh," said Frieda.

"We're coming into Union Station," said the man.

Frieda blinked. The man looked at her uneasily.

"Are you alright?" he asked.

"All right?" echoed the train, in a derisive drawl.

"Alright?" repeated Frieda thickly. She pulled herself together. "I'm fine, thank you."

She picked her textbook from the floor and gathered her belongings together, then checked her watch. It was half-past eight.

Frieda began to hurry down the aisle to the compartment doors. She had just realized that if she was quick, she could make it to residence in time to watch the latest episode of her television mini-series.

I'll take a T.V. break until ten, she decided. Then I'll really get to work with a vengeance. After all, that still leaves me twelve straight hours to study: I can work through the night, write the exam in the morning, and catch up on my sleep tomorrow afternoon.

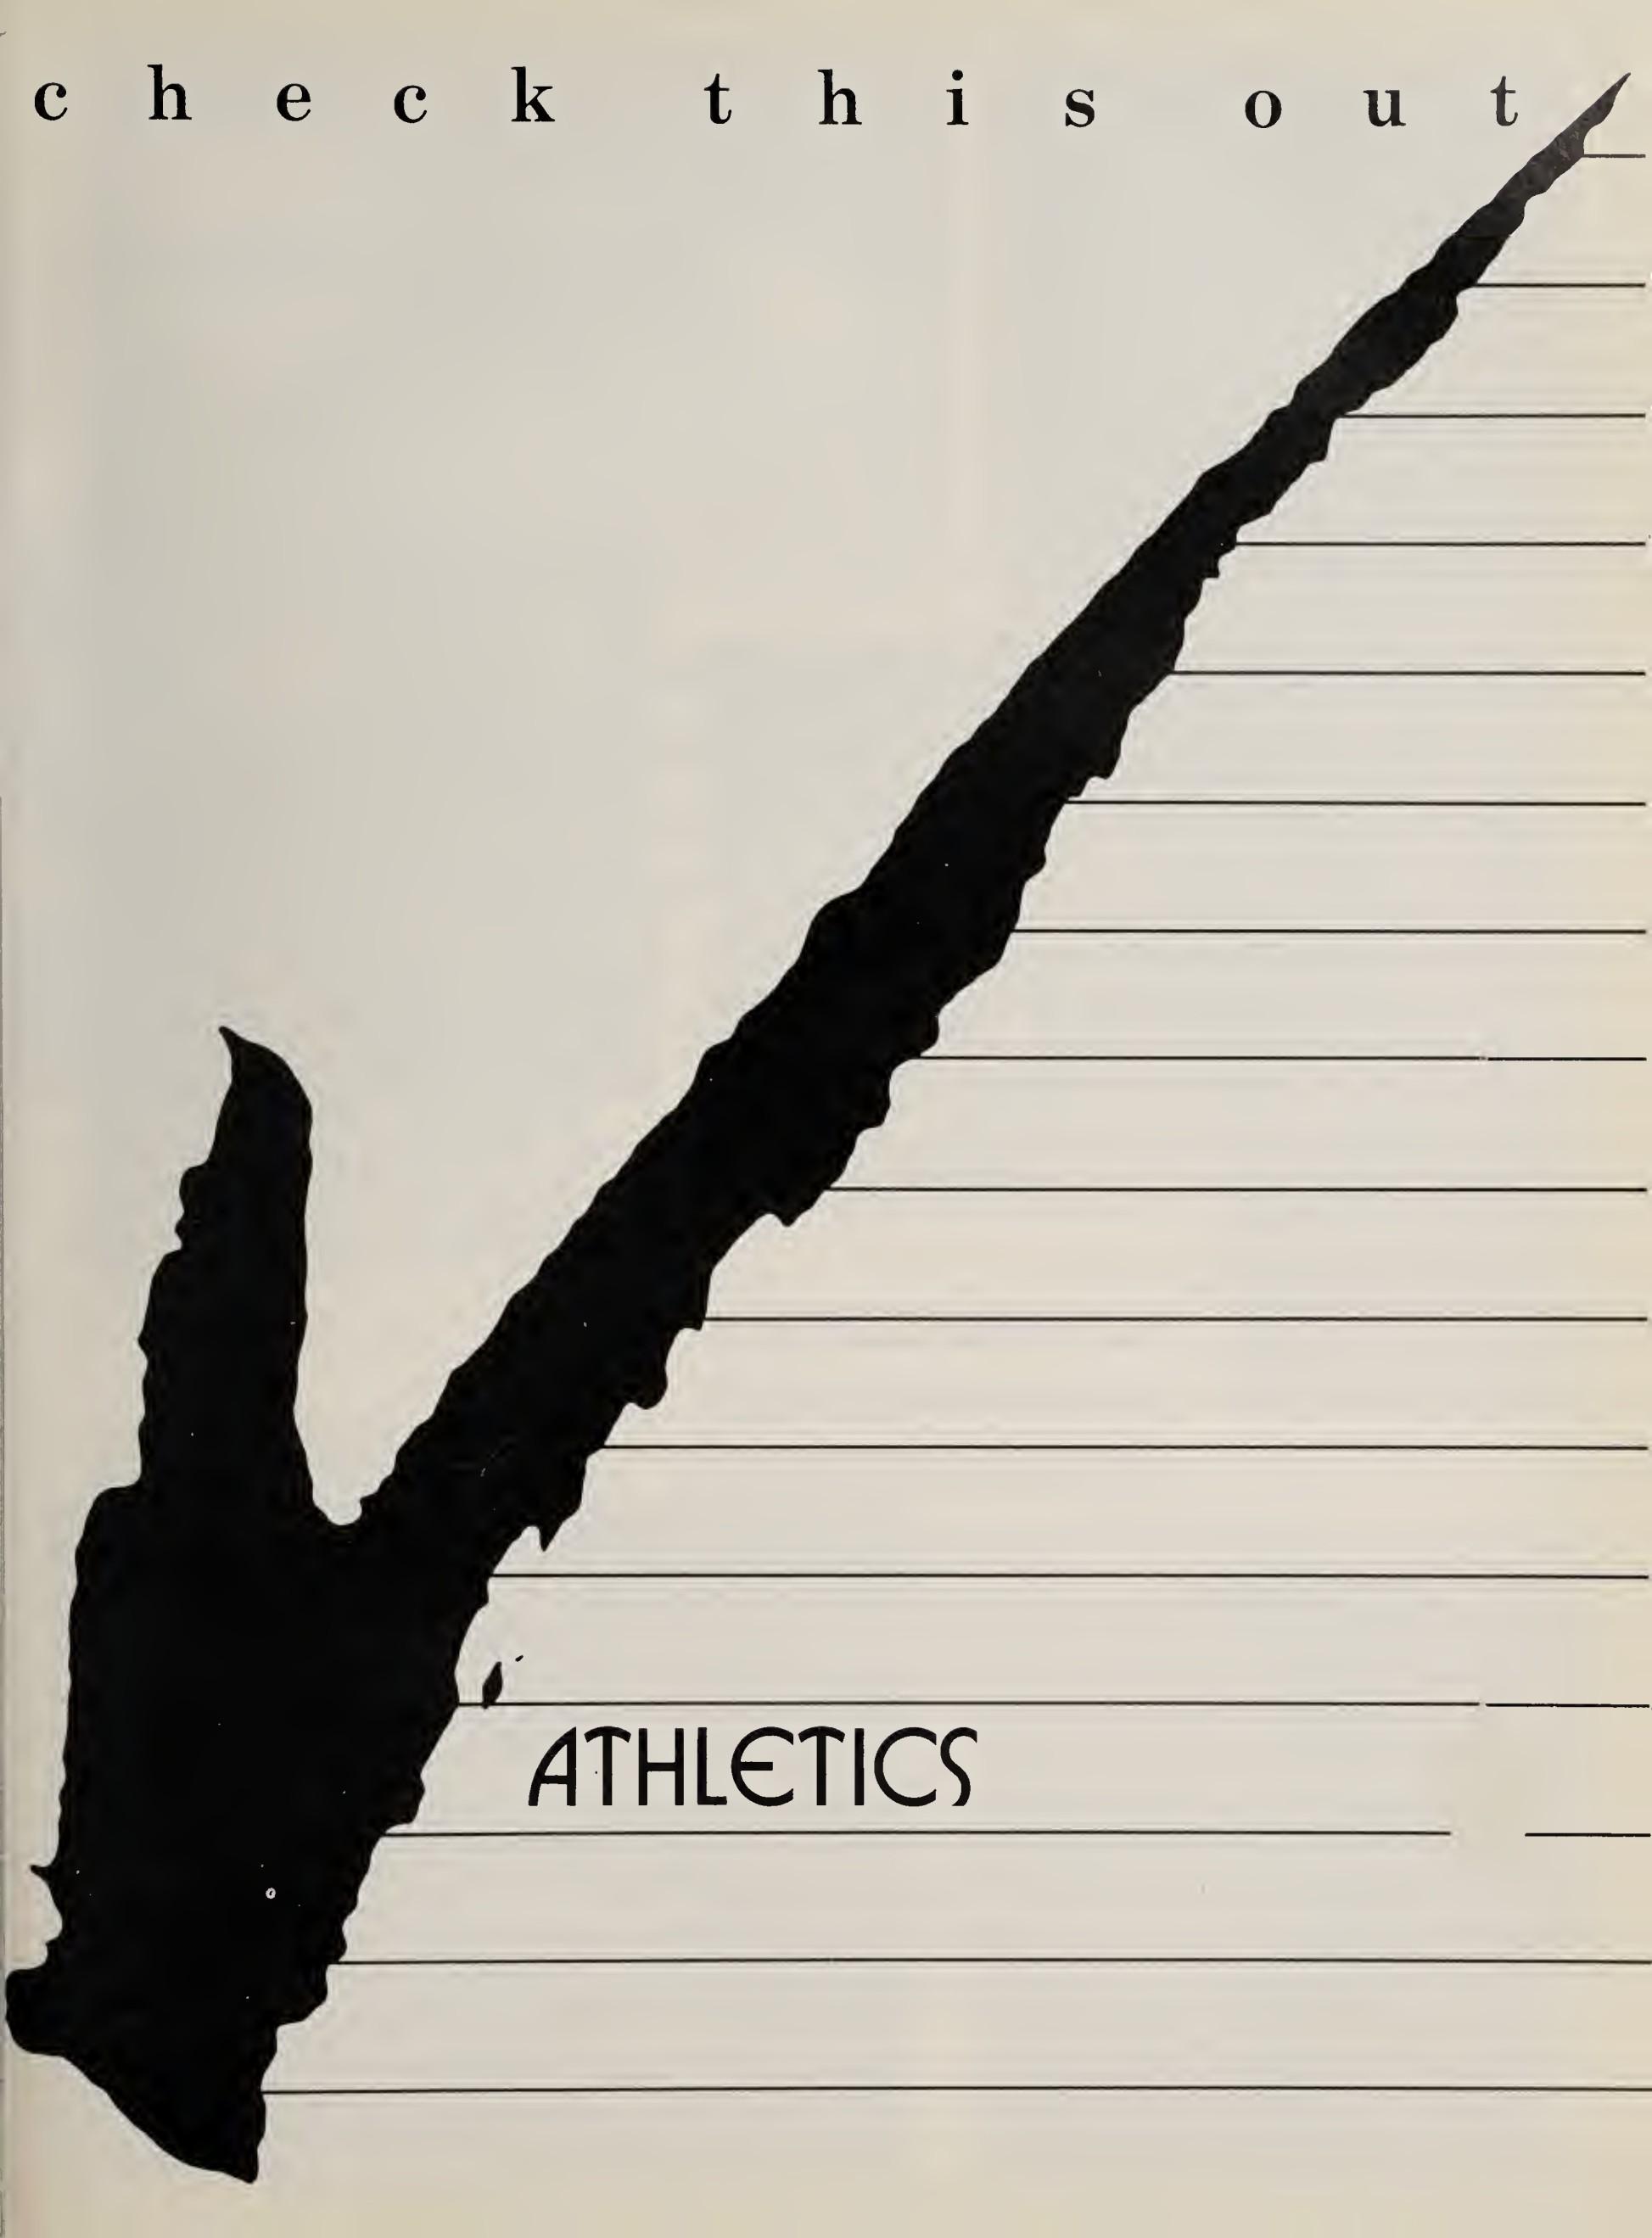

I mean, let's be realistic about this, she reasoned to herself. Anatomy: that's an enormous subject. Surely they can only expect us to memorize so much for that exam.

"So . . . much . . . for . . . that . . ." agreed the train, sighing to a stop beside the platform.

ATHLETICS

The Directors: Anne and Caroline who feel that they deserve a trip to the Bahamas, all Xpenses paid for by NUR Student Council, since they have worked their guts out all year and have played on EVERY team! Even so, we still manage to have fun.

Do you need instructions as to how to play the game?

The official nursing Spider-man gloves!
Our secret weapon! SHHH!

This should encourage us all to get out there and exercise.

Christine says, "OOH, AH! Volleyball is a great way to loose weight!"

What's everyone doing standing around?

It's a real bummer when you don't catch the ball.

THE FOOTBALL TEAM OR WHAT'S LEFT OF IT

What skill!

The Football Team! Consisting of Marlene Masher Berghius, Caroline Crusher Traynor, Anne Anhilator Chesser - the rest of the team was previously crushed in a massive pile on!

I want that right now!

An incredible display of strength!

Coed Volleyball: (Back) Guido, Shan, Ken, Milan (Front) Anne, Tammy, Julie, Christine, and of course Caroline.

Soccer

Nice Legs! This is what coed sports is all about.

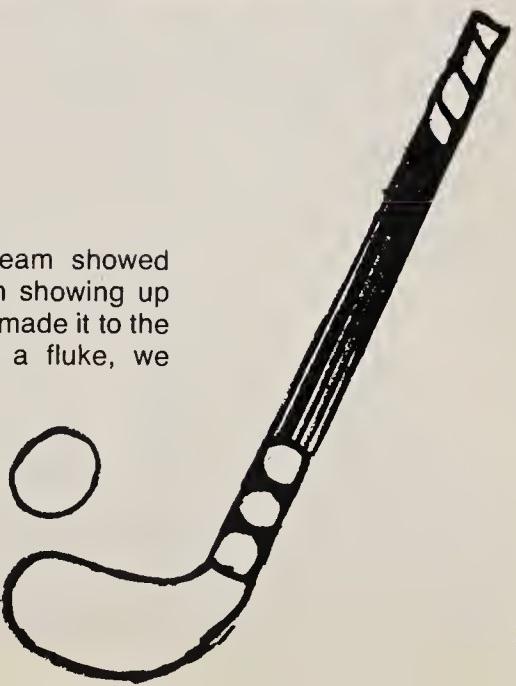

FIELD HOCKEY & WATER POLO

You think you're going to get by me??

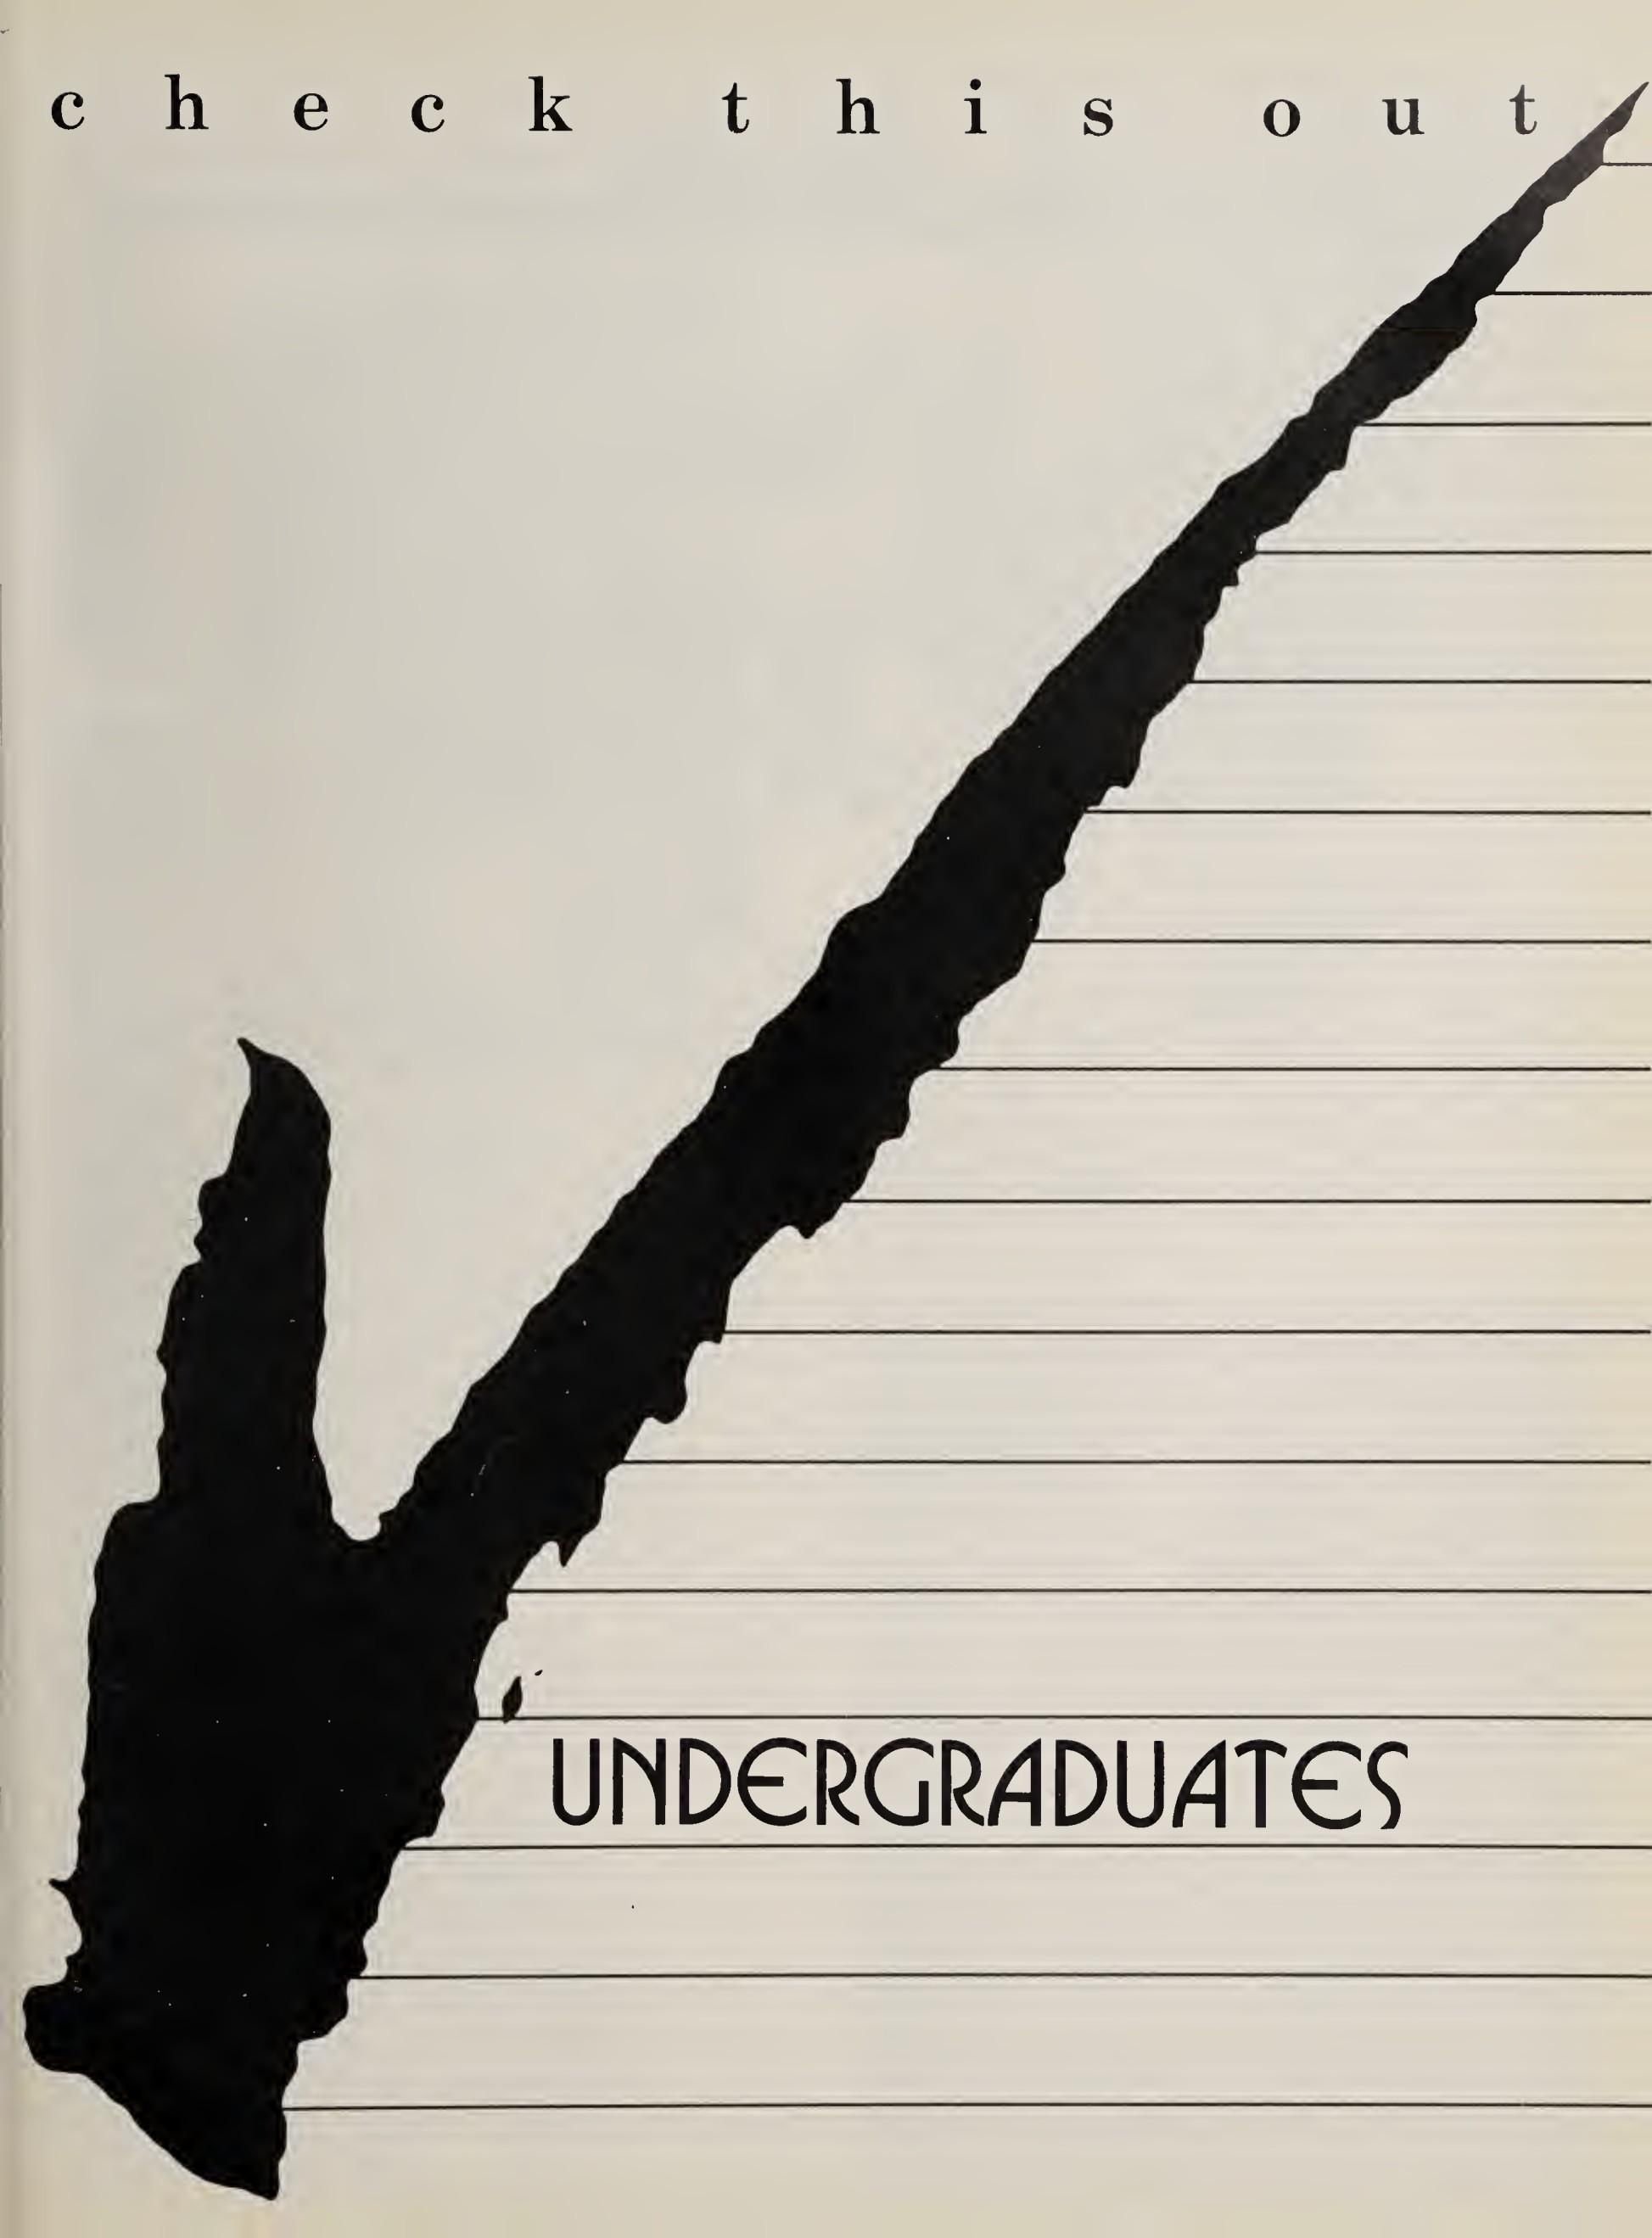

Our field hockey team showed tremendous spirit in showing up to games! We even made it to the playoffs where, by a fluke, we lost!

A common First Year phrase: "What should I wear to clinical on day one?"

Emmanuel Martin's evaluation of Joy Tiemon's muscle mass and tone.

Amy is either laughing or crying over first-year practicums (Nur 102Y).

With the first year under our belts, the bulk of us felt self-assured that we could survive the second. Giving needles, playing advocate, assessing, nurse stuff, was what we wanted to do. Even the horrendous renditions of "Clinical Tuesday" could not daunt our enthusiasm until September 14, 1987. By November, most faces had lost their rosy complexions and healthy shine. Lethargy had become the way of life from Monday at nine to Friday at noon and little hope was given at making it through the year with our sanity intact. The future seemed bleak. For many, reading week was spent doing just that - reading. But this proved to be the turning point in the class moral. Things picked up and once again we were the "Sensational Seconds". We graduated to become the "Successful Seconds" but have not forgotten all the highs and lows of the year. When asked how we made it? Most of us agree that we couldn't have made it without the help of all our friends. Thanks a million I couldn't have made it without you! Look out third year, !Cause here we come!!

STUDENT COUNCIL

Being Prez this year has been a lot of fun! Some of our accomplishments through our Student's Council this year included painting the student lounge (remember the old colour?), daytime parties (including the Blues Buster), and our great track pants that tell people who we are (from about a mile away)! Anyway, I'd like to thank everyone who was on the Student's Council this year for your help and enthusiasm. I couldn't have survived without you!

Good luck to the graduating class! . . . And to everyone else . . . remember, we'll be there someday too!

What a charitable year! The annual Shinerama Nursing Tea at SUDS was a success not to mention the terrific fun and good eats. Our many donations at Halloween went to UNICEF while the money made by selling candy canes at Christmas was given to the United Way. All the organizations were extremely appreciative of the generous contributions. Thanks to everyone who helped out!!

Susan Phillips,
Charity Representative.

The year began with the Wine & Cheese
With Homecoming soon to follow.
The fact that only the Engineer's songs were played
Was really hard to swallow.
The Halloween Pub soon saved the day
With costumes the finest ever.
But as the attendance varied far from the fees
It was surely a losing endeavor.

But Christmas did come with all of its glitter
And the lounge was full of joy.
All the students piled in for free food
What tactics our social reps employ!

And soon the Spring Formal in all of its class
Was held at the majestic Old Mill.
The music was boppin! The dancing was hot
The nurses were dressed to kill.

The boat cruise with Forestry was still yet to come
On the bow of the Mariposa Belle.
And though this event was the last of the year
Everything went fairly well.

Although Spirit Challenge wasn't the same
Without Reading Week in the sun.
We went to the games and cheered on the Blues
And we almost had just as much fun.

S.H.O.U.T. (Nursing) provides students who have completed NUR 205S with the opportunity to work at the Alexander Park and Niagara Community Health Clinics. Prior to this year, students worked with physicians. Since it was more appropriate to involve the nurse practitioners, the switch was made, and the results have been overwhelmingly positive. Twenty third year students (almost a quarter of the class) participated; a large increase over previous years. Participants were able to observe the nurse practitioners at work, practise their health assessment skills, and generally gain a better understanding of what nursing in the community setting can involve. The nurse practitioners Rosie Henderson and Debbie Holman were very informative and open to students' questions. I have enjoyed my association with the nurse practitioners and other staff at the clinics. I found the experience both rewarding and interesting.

YEARBOOK STAFF 87/88

Absent: Dorina Rico, Sue Huang, Edson Jillared, Laurel Tien, Sharon Hirsh, Jennifer Kang, and Pat Farret.

Finally, here it is! Our edition of Highlights 87/88. A yearbook is a record of a part of our lives that will never be relived again, thus it is something we will always cherish. I think everyone on this year's staff would agree that it has been a long haul, but it was all worth it. Who can forget memories of days like; "The deadline is tomorrow!", "I can't find that picture!", and "Spencer called again!" I'm sure every student can empathize with the question we tend to ask ourselves from time to time; "Will we ever survive what lay ahead of us?". In the end we can all proudly say we not only survived, but has conquered the tough times. This year's graduates are living proof of that. Personally, I would not have survived and conquered without the help of my staff. I would like to thank them for all their dedication and creative spirit. Many thanks to the numerous others who has helped us bring to you the laughter, the sorrow . . . the memories of the 1987-1988 year. In addition, a special thanks to Corinna Chung for the time she has spent in creating our cover design. Congratulations to this year's graduating class and the greatest success and happiness to the staff and students of the Faculty of Nursing.

I can't believe that another year has past us by I hope that Highlights 88 has captured the many moments that you will remember for all times. I am really happy to have taken part in the production of the yearbook and I would like to thank the yearbook staff for all their time and creativity. Good luck next year and congratulations to the graduating class.

DRUG RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

Who needs it? Canada does.

PARKE-
DAVIS

Products of drug research developed in any country, can help to improve the quality of our lives. But drug research and development when conducted in Canada, can bring more immediate improvements to all of us who live here.

FOR STARTERS, IT CREATES EMPLOYMENT

Drug research requires the myriad skills of professionals, technicians and clericals... all working to one common goal: perfecting what we do know; searching for what we don't know.

And Canada boasts some of the best people for these jobs by world standards.

It's a multi-faceted industry that can employ virtually thousands of Canadians in many challenging areas:

Drug Discovery — finding new substances that have desirable drug actions;

Toxicology — determining and measuring the incidence and severity of side effects associated with new drugs;

Clinical Research — showing that drugs work safely in patients and comparing them with other drugs to demonstrate where they can be most useful;

Product Development — developing stable, tablet, liquid or injectable products for convenient use and establishing tests to ensure consistent quality.

(For example, once penicillin was discovered, it took nearly two decades for mass production and product forms to be perfected before it became readily available on a world-wide basis.)

BUT THAT'S NOT ALL.

DRUG RESEARCH INVOLVES CANADIAN HEALTH PROFESSIONALS AND THE ACADEMIC COMMUNITY.

On an increasing basis, clinical trials on new drugs are conducted by leading Canadian physicians, many times in conjunction with major teaching hospitals. Universities gain substantially too, and not merely through grants and financial assistance. Projects assigned to educational institutions provide hands-on research to challenge their young bright students... our professionals of tomorrow.

So you see, drug research and development when conducted in Canada, can improve the quality of our lives... and the quality of our nation's health care system at the very same time.

PARKE-DAVIS AND ITS WORLD-WIDE AFFILIATES SPEND MORE THAN $250 MILLION DOLLARS EACH YEAR ON DRUG RESEARCH...AND A SIGNIFICANT AMOUNT OF THAT FIGURE IS SPENT RIGHT HERE IN CANADA.

We think it's a worthy investment.
Here's to a healthier Canada... and a healthier you.

Soft Care: Tough on bacteria - gentle on hands

If you think a bactericidal handsoap has to be rough on your skin to be effective - think again. SOFTCARE Antiseptic Lotion Soap provides effective bactericidal action against gram-negative and gram-positive organisms, while its pH-balanced formula leaves skin feeling soft, clean and fresh. Because SOFTCARE Antiseptic is not harsh on your skin, handwashing frequency will increase - and increased frequency means more effective infection control.
